Anti-Strike Laws Based on Bolshevism; "Collectivism Gone Mad," Unionist Says

Washington, Feb. 21.—Collectivism gone mad, with Russian bolshevism as its model, is the contention of American Unionist, in reply to the New York World's request for a statement on an anti-strike memorial law. The editorial in the issue of the paper, "Collectivism Gone Mad," is a scathing attack on the proposed law, which would make it a crime for any person to strike or to join a strike. The editorial states that the law is based on the principle of collectivism, which is the belief that the individual is a part of a whole, and that the whole is greater than the sum of its parts.
